How Huge Blocks of the "Raw Material" Are Turned and Bored into Great Guns.

The Two New "Rifles" Now Under Construction at the Navy Yard.

The two new 6-inch steel guns now being constructed in the ordnance shops at the pavy yard will probably not be finished docket was 836. Since that time 423 new for several months. The work of building them is necessarily a slow one. All the labor is performed in the shops here, except the manufacture of the steel. That is done at the Midvale works in Easton, Pa. The steel then is shipped to Washington, and the work of converting it to cannon is performed.

This is a complex operation, and to the looker on is decidedly interesting. The steel is first "turned" by a steam lathe working slowly, but with tremendous power, until the heavy mass of "steel in the rough," so to speak, becomes a long cylindrico-conoidal column. In this condition it is placed in proper position and a hole drilled clear proper position and a hole drilled clear through it by means of what is called a "hog bit." This hog bit is a small rectangle of very hard steel, turned up at one end in such a manner as to form a rude vertical section of a spherical triangle. The whole rectangular piece is then clamped down upon a flat shaft of chilled iron in such a manner as to fit in and form one piece with the shaft. The latter has at the opposite end a cylindrical shape, which end is hold in a frame and worked by appropriate machinery end a cylindrical shape, which end is hold in a frame and worked by appropriate machinery moved by steam upon one end of the steel column to be perforated. The end of the oclumn is first "dug into" a little, and then the "hog bit" does its work. It revolves on its axis and the "bit" describes a circle, tearing out the hard steel slowly but surely. As the guns have a bore of six inches diameter, and the bit describes a circle of only 2½ inches radius, the enlargement of the perforation is accomplished by other bits.

Once perforated, the now hollow tubes of steel requires to be "jacketed," "collared," and "breeched" before it is allowed to graduate into the society of cannon. The jacket and "breeched" before it is allowed to graduate into the society of cannon. The jacket is an outside wrap of steel, hellowed in the same way, heated until it expands sufficient to be slipped over the tube it is intended to jacket. Upon cooling this outside wrap contracts and presses upon the now inside tube with almost the same degree of cohesion as the molecules of the steel themselves. The object of the "jacket" is to strengthen the gun and prevent accident.

The explosive force of the gases, evolved from gunpowder being tremendous, and occurring mostly at the breech, the primary object is to strengthen this latter part. Collars of steel, great blocks of the carbonized from, having been turned into shape and perforated, are next expanded by heat, and slipped over the breech part of the gun. When contracting they grow into and become a part of it. The breech head of the gun is next lathed and slipped over the breech part of the gun. When contracting they grow into and become a part of it. The breech head of the gun is next lathed and fashioned, different workmen being employed on different parts of this. The rifling of the gun is another stept. A different kind of "bit" from the "hog"; a spur of steel tempered to great hardness is clamped to the center of a semicircular piece of copper and iron, and this semicircular piece of copper and iron, and this last device is slowly worked through the gun on a spiral turn, giving the "rifle twist." The breech head is then grooved and ad-

The breech head is then grooved and adjusted, and the breech cap formally adjusted. This, as is known to all who have examined breech loaders, swings back on a hinge or spring, and when closed is securely locked by a lever clamp.

The body of one of the guns—that is, the inside tube—is now ready. Work is being actively pursued on the other and on the various mechanism that sees to make up one of the mechanism that goes to make up one of the new improved rifled cannon. Some of it, the breech part especially, is complex, and re-quires skillful workmen, special tools and a long time to be wrought successfully.

LYNCHBURG NEWS.

The New Custom House-Registration Sunday , School Convention-Regatta-Visitors-The Debt.

Special Dispatch.
LYNCHBURG, VA., May 9.—The last congress appropriated $100,000 for the building Lynchburg of a custom house and postoffice, and yesterday Maj. J. G. Hill, of Wash ington, the government architect in such cases, reached this city to determine the site for the new building. Several locations are presented and pressed by their respective friends as the "best place," but there are only two central locations offered, and I have no doubt that Maj. Hill will select the best of the two. The matter has been long delayed for uncontrollable reasons, but it is now hoped that the work will be commenced and pressed to completion with great promptness and energy. The structure will be an orna-ment to the city and a much needed improve-The registration of voters in the city clos yesterday at sundown without any disturbance. The number of registration and transfers are not yet ascertained, but it is quite large of both colors, and the whites are supposed to have a majority in two of the three wards, but how these whites will all vote on the twenty-fourth of May remains to be seen.

The Sunday school convention of the Methodist churches of the Lynchburg district met in Court Street church last night, and was very numerously attended by delegates and citizens, the Rev. J. Powell Garland, presiding. The proceedings were extremely interesting and conducted with great spirit and order. Various questions are up for discussion, and the session is extended.

pected to continue for several days.

A special meeting of the state regatta committee of the Virginia Rowing association is now in session in this city to arrange preliminaries for the next race. The Petersburg crew are represented by R. Butter Mahone and Charles Hunter; the Olympic club, of Richmond, by R. H. Smith; the University, by Mr. Carroll, and the Tobacco City by J. W. Edwards.

Pennsylvania legislature to the leading bat-tle fields of Virginia, taking most prominently in their route the cities of Richmonu and Petersburg, was a most pleasurable event to our people and we hope to themselves, and we only regret that it could not have been extended to this interesting section of the state, which, while it cannot boast of its par-ticular battle fields, like various other por-tions of the old commonwealth, can nevertheless present to the traveler and pleasure seeker as many beautiful objects of attraction and study as any other section of the state or country. The Blue Ridge itself, which in its majesty lifts its lefty summit to the soft, blue skies, with its fountains of healing waters, beats anything to be seen of healty or grandeur down about the sandy shores of the surrounding sea 3 and, when the traveler comes to fix his admiring gaze upon the towering peaks of Ottor (once the property of Jefferson and always the height of sublimity); or upon the Natural bridge, where Washington's name is engraven eternally upon its rocks; or upon the Balcony falls, where the two rivers, north and south, dash their terrents through the mountains, and make the great James that was the first river to receive the immigrant ship and its carge of John Smith, the visitor feels comcargo of John Smith, he visitor feels com-pelled at once to concode the palm of great superiority to this beautiful Piedmont sec-tion over all the battle fields from the first Manassas to the bloody crater at Petersburg. May their next visit be to Appemattox and the mountains of Virginia.

WANTED—THE PERMANENT REMOVAL OF SUPERPLUOUS HAIR BY ELECTROGIST, 798 ELEVENTH STIERET NORTHWEST, WASHINGTON, D. C.
Superfluous Hair.—Superfluous hair is an unnatural and excessive growth of hair on the female face—is most conspicuous on the upper lip, chin, and checks,
It also grows upon the arms, and from moles and birthmarks. This shnormal growth of hair is a prevalent facial deformity, and one which is frequently observed. We see it on the street, in the drawing room, and wherever ladics congregate. Few persons have any idea of its prevalence. In nearly every museum of living curiosities a bearded woman figures as one of the chief attractions. It is difficult to estimate the number of indices in private life who endeavor by artifice of various kinds to conceal the unpleasant fiect that they have of might have a beard, and were the secrets of the bounder known we would be surprised at the number of our society ladies who are adepts in the use of the razor.

Ladies have resorted to the most barbarous method of forture to rid themselves of this obnoxious growth.
Some use deplicatories, which are causaic in their acsurprised as the filter others use tweezers or plaster, whilst many use the schsoors or rasor, all of which

for this unnatural hairiness is far from being a trifling matter.

True, it may not kill the patient, but is very apt to affect her disposition, and if unmarried is likely to talive her prospects in life, and may eventually ruin her health and happiness by producing a mental disquiest ude, which in many cases verges on melanchely. The frequent occurrence of superfluous hair among to same women has been observed, and no doubt that the mental worry caused by this facial hairiness has acced as an exciting cause and tended to develop linsarily, for what greater facial deformity can any woman have than an incipient beard. To a sensitive, refued lady it is almost unendurable: she knows that it is sure to attract attention and to cause remark. Dr. Van Dyck is now successfully treating a remarkably interesting case in this city of a young tady, a member of one of the most eminent Washington families, when her mother trought her to the doctor's office, two months ago, she was on the very verge of insanity, here was indeed a citiable case. She is not more than When her mother brought her to the doctor's office, two months ago, she wis on the very verge of insanity; here was indeed a pitiable case. She is not more than twenty years of ago, with parents who almost idolize her; has a tovely home, and is surrounded by every comfort and uxury that heart could wish for. But with all this she had this excessive hirsuical growth, which married her life and cast a gloon over the entire household. Her upper lip_chim, and cheeks were covered with a thick, heavy growth of black hair, which, from cutting and extracting, grew as luxuriantly as the beard of a man. She would seclude room for hours at a time, and even dreaded to mest members of her own family, because one of her brothers thoughtlossly teased her about her beard. Dr. Van Dyck began operating in her case two months ago, and to-day this young lady is one of the happiest of the happy, as a result of the operation of electrolysis.
